

Uncle Raymond played a huge role in my secondary school life. Not only have he helped me develop myself academically but also holistically. He never fails to expose us to different alternatives to look at the same picture. His way of teaching brings us outside of conventional textbooks facts but to real world situations. He provides materials that are useful to help us memorise facts but more importantly he equips us with critical thinking skills that is of vital importance in the workforce. Outside of the academic spectrum, Uncle Raymond has also played a huge role in my private life. He aided me in my transformation from a rebellious boy to a young man of mature thinking. His patience and guidance have also impacted many of my fellow schoolmates. He never fails to ask about how my family is doing or how I am coping with my studies. Although on many occasions I disappointed him with my behaviour and actions, he still relentlessly stood by my side, never giving up hope on me. He is truly a man of grace and goodness.
